Maria Cordero-Ricardo, DMD, MS, MPH
Board-Certified Pediatric Dentist

As a mom, pediatric dentist, biomedical engineer, and dental school faculty, Dr. Maria offers families a uniquely tailored approach to children's dental care. She earned her Doctor of Medicine in Dentistry degree at the Rutgers School of Dental Medicine. She went on to complete her specialized Pediatric Dentistry Residency at The Ohio State University and Nationwide Children's Hospital in Columbus, Ohio.

She is a board-certified pediatric dentist with a deep commitment to promoting children's oral health through nutrition, wellness, prevention, and a focus that includes lactation and infant oral health support. Dr. Maria has extensive pediatric experience in treating children of all ages and has taught hundreds of dental students and residents over the last decade.

Beyond serving families, Dr. Maria describes herself as "a joyful wife and mother of 2 living in the Art Museum neighborhood of Philadelphia. I feel gratitude for living in Philadelphia today and love exploring the museums and green spaces with my family and neighbors."

“Infant Oral Health:
An Update for a New Generation of Children”

Parents of small children are often surprised at how a few decisions early on can have such a long-term impact on oral health. This program will provide an update on infant nutrition and habits as they relate to oral health and review high yield communication strategies based on motivational interviewing techniques. It will wrap up with an overview of minimally invasive caries management strategies that have become commonly available in pediatric dentistry in the last decade.

Objectives:

- ◆ Expand understanding of infant and early childhood nutrition and anticipatory guidance for oral health.
- ◆ Enhance communication strategies for caregivers of young children to adopt new health behaviors.
- ◆ Discuss minimally invasive caries management strategies for young children in your practice.
